A New Year, A New Program and A New Book!
by Curt Witcher

With this issue, we start our second year of publishing “Genealogy Gems.” I hope the monthly e-zine has provided you with many benefits for your genealogical research and a much better idea of the depth and scope of our collection here in Fort Wayne. Look for even more information in the coming months about useful new collections and some “new extras” in this coming year’s editions.

On April 20th and 21st, the Allen County Public Library is sponsoring a seminar on British Isles Research that you simply cannot afford to miss. As the following book relates to Indiana and is a very fine compilation, I would like to bring to your attention a very new and very worthwhile publication by Dennis Northcott entitled, “Indiana Civil War Veterans: Transcription of the Death Rolls of the Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic, 1882-1948.” This work contains records of more than 22,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic—the GAR being the largest association of Civil War Union veterans. In addition to each GAR member’s name, one will also find rank, company, regiment or ship, name and location of the GAR post (i.e., local chapter) to which he belonged, and date of death. Additional appendices provide supplemental data including biographies of some of the more prominent veterans. An order form and further details are available at <www.NGPublications.com>.

Library Acquires an Anthony Wayne Family Bible
by John D. Beatty

The Allen County Public Library has added an artifact of historical and genealogical significance to its collection with its recent acquisition of the Anthony and Mary (Penrose) Wayne Family Bible. General Anthony Wayne (1745-1796) was a staff officer of George Washington during the Revolutionary War and later took charge of the American army in the 1790s. His military victory at the Battle of Fallen Timbers helped to establish American control of the Old Northwest Territory. The artifact complements a manuscript letter of General Wayne, which the library acquired in 1994.

Published in 1788, the Wayne family bible was presented by Wayne’s wife Mary to their son Isaac Wayne, a Philadelphia attorney, probably soon after the book was published and contains what appears to be her inscription to him. Perhaps it was Isaac Wayne who carefully recorded the deaths of both of his parents on the bible’s flyleaves, as well as his own marriage and the births and deaths of his children. Later, the bible passed to Isaac’s niece, Mary Wayne (Atlee) Evans, daughter of William Richardson Atlee and Margaretta Wayne, and wife of Issachar Evans, who continued the tradition of recording family events in its pages.

More than sixty years of family information is recorded, and the result is a virtual manuscript genealogy of vital events, representing possibly the most significant primary source for the study of Anthony Wayne’s descendants. A variety of genealogical documents accompany the bible, including two fragments for the ancestors of Issachar Evans; pages from the Robert and Margaret Towers Bible, published in London in 1756; and pages from the bible of Jonathan and Mary Gostilowe and Robert T. and Eliza (Ridgway) Evans, published at Oxford, England in 1762. Among the other documents is a typescript description of the Anthony Wayne birthplace at Waynesborough, Pennsylvania.

The Library plans to digitize these manuscripts and post them on its website in the near future.

Georgia Land Lottery Indexes
By Delia Cothrun Bourne

No other state gave land away in quite the same manner as did Georgia with her land lotteries. Over two decades, eight lotteries (1805, 1807, 1820, 1821, 1827, land and gold lotteries in 1832, and 1833) gave to white settlers the lands owned by the Cherokee and Creek tribes. Fulfilling residency requirements, varying from one to three years, adult bachelors were entitled to one draw; men with a wife and/or child got two; a widow with minor child, two; a minor orphan, or family of orphans, one. Invalid or indigent Revolutionary veterans received an extra two draws. Eligibility varied through the years, sometimes including single women 21 and over, or indigent and disabled veterans of other wars. A draw was a chance at land, not a guarantee. "Fortunate drawers" in previous lotteries were not eligible for later lotteries. Fees were charged primarily to support the bureaucracy of the system.

Among the volumes ACPL owns on the lotteries are Robert Davis and Silas Lucas's Georgia land lottery papers, 1805-1914 (975.8 D295ge), Martha Lou Houston's Reprint of official register of land lottery of Georgia, 1827 (975.8 R29h), and James Smith's Cherokee land lottery (975.8 Sm6c). The Davis-Lucas book consists primarily of abstracts of selected loose papers from the Georgia Surveyor General's Department, with a map showing areas of each lottery and a list of the counties formed by the lotteries. The Smith book includes land and gold lotteries, with maps of each district.

Silas Lucas also published several indexes, including Second or 1807 land lottery of Georgia (975.8 Se2), Third and fourth or 1820 and 1821 land lotteries of Georgia (975.8 G2964t), and 1832 gold lottery of Georgia (975.8 L96e). These volumes list grantee, militia district, lot number, district number and county where the lot is located.

Virginia and Ralph Wood’s 1805 Georgia land lottery (975.8 W85e) lists all registrants, not just the fortunate drawers, name, serial number, indication of prize or blank (those who were not “fortunate drawers”), and county of residence. Lottery Grants to Revolutionary Veterans by Alex Hitz (975.8 G296a) lists veterans in the third, fifth and sixth lotteries by name, with county of residence, lottery year, land lot number, district number, sometimes section number, and county. Alphabetical index to Georgia’s 1832 gold lottery by Mary Bondurant Warren (975.8 W25a) includes some fraudulent drawers.

Those seeking early settlers in Georgia should make a point to try these volumes.

Sending Genealogy E-mails: The following advice was offered by the listmaster of a very busy RootsWeb mailing list. It’s worth taking to heart:

In order to increase the chances that queries will be noticed by subscribers who may have answers, let me urge posters to use informative subject lines, and to give any relevant surnames in CAPITAL LETTERS, both in the subject line, and in the body of the message. (This is not a rule, but is common advice in most genealogy mailing lists.)

...typically I do not have time to open any messages that do not have subject lines which indicate that the message contents may be of relevance to me. I’m sure I am not alone in this regard.

Here is a list of ill-chosen subject lines from very recent messages, all uninformative:

Can anyone advise me how to Proceed?
Surname interests
1891
Baptism Look up Reguest Pls.
A question Can anyone answer?

Surely the first step in getting help through a mailing list is having the listers open your messages!
