Allen County, Indiana Databases on the Web Continue to Grow
by Curt Witcher

In the early years of the Historical Genealogy Department, staff and volunteers committed to creating access tools for local records and local publications that were un-indexed. Some attention was also given to indexing regional histories published for some states around the country. Many of these took the form of printed indices and abstracts as well as card indices.

One such department-created card index was microfilmed a number of years ago by the Genealogical Society of Utah for use at the Family History Library in Salt Lake City as well as to be loaned to interested individuals through local Family History Centers. The extremely long-titled, thirty-three roll set, “Historical and Biographical Index of the North East, Mid East, Mid South, and Mid West, U.S.A.” is also available in our department. This resource provides one with a quick way to survey a couple of hundred county histories for surnames of interest.

Today, the department is committed to converting many of the print indices created decades ago to searchable databases. The first such conversion debuted on the FriendOfAllenCounty website this month--“Genealogical Records of German families in Allen County, Indiana, 1918” by Virginia Bloomfield. The information she transcribed came from the “Enemy Alien Registration Files” created by the Fort Wayne Police Department in 1918. A four page form was filled out which included a photo, fingerprints, and signatures among the information recorded. It is interesting to note that these forms (approximately 1500) still exist and are part of collections of the History Center (Fort Wayne-Allen County Historical Society). The actual forms are titled, “United States of America, Department of Justice, Registration Affidavit of Alien Enemy.” Fort Wayne residents who were German or Austrian, and not American citizens were required to file.

And speaking of the FriendsOfAllenCounty website, by this time next month, the Fort Wayne and Allen County Obituary Index will have grown by another twenty-two thousand names--putting the total number of Allen County, Indiana names in all files waiting to be discovered at more than 600,000! Be sure you visit the site regularly for new databases and additions to existing databases.

This Land Is My Land: the Indian Claims Commission
by Roberta Ridley

The Indian Claims Commission was established in 1946 to serve as a tribunal for the hearing and determination of claims against the United States arising prior to August 13, 1946 by any Indian tribe, band or other identifiable group of Indians living in the United States.

It was determined that the compensation, originally paid by the Government for Indian lands ceded by treaty or other agreements after 1871, was shockingly low when compared to market value at the time of the first payments. Tribes were entitled to recovery minus any gratuitous offsets, including previously received compensation. The Commission also received claims for uncompensated taking of land.

This collection covers claims reviewed by the commission from April 10, 1947 through May 2, 1969, and is the primary source of the 370 original petitions filed with the Commission prior to the cut off date of August 13, 1951. The Commission covered a broad area and became more aware of the problems arising between the United States and the Indians who occupied the lands sought by an expanding nation. The petitions, representing hundreds of native tribes, are separated into 611 different claims, each of which was given its own docket number.

The information contains the Claims & Decisions along with:

- Tribal Index - a comprehensive guide to the dockets of the Commission
- Docket Index - an inclusive listing of all dockets
- Table of Cases - providing a chronology of each claim as it was heard by the Commission.

Extracted example:
Miami Tribe vs.
United States, Dockets 256, 124D, E, and F Consolidated

"Offsets - Payment on the Claim - Equity requires charging the full consideration, cash plus value of land, of 1840 Treaty to both Oklahoma and Indiana Miamis because (1) the 1840 land cession, the removal west and the lands granted the Miamis in Kansas were all part of the same transaction, (2) many of the Indiana Miamis received grants of land in the east, and (3) the Indiana Miamis in not going to Kansas failed to abide by the terms of the treaty. 'The failure to remove itself was a direct benefit to these Indians because they did not have to suffer the burdens of moving or staying on Kansas land.' The Oklahoma Miamis are entitled to some benefits over the Indiana Miamis by reason of their having fulfilled their treaty obligations and undergone the burdens and suffering of living on the Kansas reservation. Pp 434, et seq."

Kevan Hansen’s Map Guide to German Parish Registers
by John D. Beatty

One of the vexing challenges for every genealogist doing research in Germany is dealing with geography. One may have the name of a village or town from a family Bible, passport, or other record, and may even be well-practiced using the Meyers Orts und Verkehrs-Lexikon des Deutchen Reichs to identify whether a town has a church. The town can then be searched in the Family History Library catalog for the availability of church and civil records.

Invariably, however, a good genealogist will want to know more. What are the other parishes located near the primary ancestral parish? What are their boundaries? What villages were located within them? Did my ancestor have family connections in those parishes?

These are important questions, and when using microfilmed parish records, a thorough researcher will want to have a good handle on the geography of an ancestral area in order to look for clues in the records of other nearby churches. It is not at all uncommon to find German families spread out over more than one parish, particularly if they were agricultural laborers. Couples often found their future spouses in neighboring towns.

A useful new research tool to address these questions is Kevan Hansen’s Map Guide to German Parish Registers series, published by Heritage Creations of North Salt Lake, Utah. Each of these volumes are devoted to particular German states and offer outline maps of parishes located within a particular Kreis or county. Thus, they are useful for determining the proximity of towns to other parishes in the area. In addition to offering clues about other possible records, they can "empower the researcher when confronted with the necessity of a radius search."

Regrettably, they are not useful for identifying tiny villages located within the boundaries of a particular parish, because the maps are simply not sufficiently detailed. A more careful search of Meyers and the Karte des Deutches Reiches map series (available on film from the Family History Library) may still be worthwhile.

At this writing, 10 volumes of the Map Guide are now in print, covering the Grand Duchies of Hessen, Baden, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Oldenburg and Schleswig-Holstein, the province of Hessen-Nassau and the Kingdom of Wuerttemberg. Additional volumes are planned for the rest of the German Empire, with the Rhineland expected soon.

Few German families lived in the isolation of a single village. Knowing what towns were located nearby will almost certainly help a researcher locate additional family connections in nearby churches

1911 Census of Canada

The longstanding difficulty regarding public access to the Canadian census after 1906 has been resolved, and the 1911 census has been released. Digitized images can be consulted at the Library and Archives of Canada site, http://www.collectionscanada.ca/archivianet/1911/index-e.html

The census is not indexed, but the full entries (in digitized form) are given and there is a table of census districts and sub-districts to assist you in choosing the one you need. Once you have a census page in front of you, manipulating it to see the data, store or print it is similar to the censuses on Ancestry.com. Although LAC states that some pages are faded and hard to read, I have not encountered any that were indecipherable.
